

Fallon and Smith Named Executive Directors at Parrish Construction Group

Jim Fallon, Sr. LEED AP and Dallas C. Smith, LEED AP promoted to Executive Directors in Georgia construction firm.

Perry, GA / Roswell, GA (PRWEB) April 23, 2013

Parrish Construction Group announces the promotions of Jim Fallon, Sr., LEED AP and Dallas C. Smith, LEED AP from Project Director to Executive Director.

"As Executive Directors, Jim and Dallas will lead our firm into the coming years with a focus on quality construction, expert management, successful projects and most importantly, satisfied customers," stated Parrish Construction Group President, Dave Cyr.

Fallon is located in the Roswell office and now serves in a Director role on all projects in the North Georgia region as well as leading the efforts to secure new projects. Major projects currently underway include a new classroom building on the Henry County campus of Southern Crescent Technical College, new elementary school in Thomson and capital improvements to the Elbert County Schools facilities.

Fallon joined Parrish in 2008 and demonstrated exceptional project leadership and client service. His background includes expertise in HVAC/Mechanical systems and design as well as overall business acumen, having owned a small construction firm in Americus.

Smith oversees all projects in Central/South Georgia including multiple projects for the Houston County Board of Education, a new high school in Sandersville and an HVAC Renovation on the LaGrange Campus of West Georgia Technical College. He is also responsible for the training and development of all project management staff in the company headquarters in Perry.

Smith joined Parrish in 1999 as an assistant project manager and has progressed to his current role by demonstrating exceptional organizational skills, strong project management and supporting the company's vision and goals. His dedication to client satisfaction and ability to bring in successful projects have been instrumental in the firm's growth and development.

"Having Jim leading our efforts in North Georgia is a great asset for our company," stated Cyr. "His experience as a business owner prior to joining our team and as a Project Director for Parrish, coupled with his business development skills will be the catalyst for regional growth to support the firm's expansion goals. Dallas has proven himself to be a true leader within the firm. His growth and development throughout his years at Parrish and his exceptional organizational skills have resulted in many successful and often award-winning projects, not to mention happy, repeat customers."
